

Some People Want Everything

Fandom: HP

Çift: Snape/Harry

Konu: Some people want everything, but I want nothing.

---

Some people want everything.

I want nothing.

-----

"Why?"

"Why?!?"

"Yes, why? Why can't we have a relationship?"

Looking at him, seeing the usual unusually conditioned hair, emerald eyes, one couldn't say "no.". But he could. He said "I accept" so many times in his life that he only gives negative answers now.

"Because I don't want to have any, aren't there any enough brain cells in your head to understand that? Maybe yes, it's my fault, how can one think with that much of a thing called hair attached to his head?"

He didn't even reply, didn't even look. He just came forward, like he was after his Snitch in the last game of the year, like he'd win the Tournament, like he wanted this more than everything, and he kissed him.

He just kissed him.

After a second, he pulled back, and looked at him, searching for a new challenge, a new clue, a new refuse. But there wasn't any. Not to be seen exactly.

"Why can't you want this? When you want it so bad?"

Snape took a deep breath, like wanting to hold the answers which he shouldn't give, but Harry was waiting, that impatient kid was waiting, waiting for a stupid reason to destroy, to kill, to catch.

"We can't be anything, why can't you see that?"

"Isn't anything a thing? Like everything?"

Frowning, he looked at him, where was the logic, Snape didn't know, it maybe got lost in the middle of his throat. Maybe.

"Everything is a thing. Anything is a thing, even nothing is a thing. You want nothing, then I'll give you nothing. Just with the meaning in my verse."

And he kissed him, again. It was played like that in his verse. Or nothing meant 'kiss the one that you want so badly that you make him forget the rest of the world'.

Yes, it must have meant something like that.

Fazla zahmetli, farkındayım, ancak çalışmayan bir servis sunmaktan iyidir diye düşünüyorum.
